A CHRONOLOGY OF THE ARMENIAN PROBLEM
WITH A BIBLIOGRAPHY
(1878-1923)
FOREWORD

So far many works have been published about the Armenian incidents that took place during the Ottoman Empire period. Most of them have been written either by Armenians or by supporters of their thesis and based on subjective criteria such as memoirs.

Historical research is extremely important in order to clearly understand these events which occurred 85 years ago. The indispensable element of historical research is, beyond doubt, documents in the archives. The General Directorate of the State Archives has been bringing to light the documents concerning the Armenian problem as a result of scientific effort and discipline.

Rivalry among Western powers and economic and political interests pursued by those powers in the region have provoked the Armenian problem and later on became an obstacle for an unbiased analysis.

Historical documents have irrefutably shown that Armenians had become an instrument for the aspirations of Western countries and Russia, had organized armed groups carrying out political activities for the independence dream, had collaborated with the enemy to stab the Ottoman army in the back and had assassinated innocent people by systematic acts of terror.

The Armenian terrorists had chosen to stab the Ottoman army in the back by collaborating with the Russian army and blocking logistically important ways (at that time the last destination point to supply the Ottoman army's military and other vital needs by train was Ulukışla Station. Revolting in Adana and its environs, Armenians cut the connection of the Ottoman army with its troops in the east).

Throughout history there has never been any hostility against Armenians in the Ottoman Empire. They were never insulted nor treated as an inferior community. Armenians were not discriminated from other Christian and Jewish communities. On the contrary, the Armenian community was called a “Loyal Nation” and Armenians were given active roles in administrative posts. They were appointed as head officials, governors, pashas, ambassadors, and were even as Minister of Foreign Affairs. They were never banned to work, isolated from downtown or forced to leave their homes. They lived in wealth and comfort.

The Armenian relocation aimed to resettle the Gregorian Armenians whose faith was similar to those of Orthodox Russians. The relocation did not cover Catholic and Protestant Armenians. Had there been a deliberate action of genocide against Armenians, as it has been claimed, all Armenians regardless of the religious sect they belong to would have been massacred. Such a case would have been labelled as genocide then. Even this important fact shows that the decision of relocation was for the defence, security and unity of the country and for the protection of innocent persons’ lives and possessions.

The relocation decision taken for the protection of the army from the systematic Armenian assaults and to prevent their collaboration with the enemy at that time was legitimate.

Besides, the possessions of the Armenians who were relocated were taken under protection. Their basic needs and financial problems were met and after the war they were allowed to return wherever they wanted. During the relocation Armenians were not deprived of food and medicine and were permitted to carry their personal belongings and movable goods. They were able to use transportation vehicles such as trains and cars and the cultural values they left behind were not destroyed. Our General Directorate brought to light the documents presenting these historical facts in its previous publications.

Now, in the framework of the publication programme of our General Directorate, we are publishing a work by one of our officials, Recep Karacakaya, Ph.D., entitled “A Chronology of the Armenian Problem with a Bibliography”. This work, which displays the chronology of incidents, is almost a first in its field.
In this chronology documents collected from the archives, newspaper articles, and works on this subject have been used. It will light the way for a more comprehensive research in this field.

We are grateful to the Directorate General of Press and Information for translating and editing this project.

Introduction

The Armenian Issue was one of the most important problems during the last fifty years of the Ottoman Empire. It emerged in the form of imperialism resulting from the rivalry between England and Russia during the Ottoman-Russian War between 1877 and 1878. From then on the Armenians strove to establish an independent nation like the other Christian minorities, living under the Ottoman rule.

In fact, for centuries the Armenians, who lived all over Ottoman territory, were secure without fear for their possessions, chastity and honor. They were free, peaceful and happy to practice their religious activities and they turned out to be more prosperous than Muslim citizens. They dealt with trade and arts, running a money-lending and goldsmiths' business, and the Ottoman Empire employed them in special services and jobs that necessitated security. For instance, they became the directors of some of the important institutions, such as the mint and the powder-magazine, and they were named as subjects of the "loyal nation". The Ottoman Empire treated the Christians equally, without making any preferences among them and without interfering into their business.

The Armenian problem did not result from the needs of the minority but from the exploitation of powerful countries. They concealed their own schemes by presenting this problem as the problem of humanity and Christianity affecting the Armenian Church as well. The Armenian Patriarchate and the Armenians who sought independence and autonomy, did not realize the intrigues to which they were subject.

This work, titled A Chronology of the Armenian Problem with a Bibliography, is written for those who are doing research on the Armenian problem. Apart from a few bibliographies, there are almost no chronological works that would benefit researchers in this field. We tried to fill this gap with our humble efforts.

In this chronology, we made use of printed archive documents, newspaper articles, and books on this topic. The works cited in this book are written in abbreviations and they are also mentioned in the bibliography.

It is very hard to make a precise chronology of the Armenian problem. We admit that this book has left out some information. Our sole consolation is that this chronological work will be a guide for researchers. Our aim is to continue collecting data and documents in this field and to write a complete chronology of the Armenian problem.

I would like to express my gratitude to Prof. Ali İhsan Gencer for his help at all stages of this work. I would also like to thank Yusuf Sarııny Ass. Prof. the General Director of the Prime Ministry State Archives, and Mr. Necati Aktas, the Assistant Director of the Prime Ministry State Archives, for their support.

1919 / 07 / 21 During the Sankamış retreat, an Armenian band of rebels, originally belonging to Antranik Pasha, committed genocide in Bedrevans, Kalender, İslamsor, Ahalik-i Ulya, Hoşu, Zanzak, Sicankala, Ağviran, Zivin, Menevür, Zars, Gerek, and Azab villages. They took about 10,000 people either prisoner or shot, bayonetted, or axed them. Some Muslims were burned with petrol; the ears and noses of children were cut off; nails were driven into their chests and they were stabbed by bayonets. Throats were cut, women's breasts were cut off, and they were tortured to death. Only a few people were able to escape. The Armenians plundered all the properties, animals, and grains of these villages, destroyed thousands of houses, shops, and mosques and burned them, stole hundreds of cattle, cows, horses, donkeys, sheep, goats, along with wheat and barley, money, gold, jewellery, and hundreds of beds, honeycomb, copper goods and robbed 70 carpets from the Ağrivan village mosque. PMOA. FA. P. WW, 136, 1919 VII 18

1919 / 07 / 24 A letter of complaint was sent to the American Ambassador in Dersaated and to the İstikbal newspaper, in order to end the cruelties committed by Armenians against Muslims in Kars, Ardahan and Batum. PMOA.FA. P. WW, 136, 1919 VII 25

1919 / 07 / 24 The Erzurum governor demanded that teachers and officers be sent to the district to encourage Muslims who were attacked by the Armenians in Nahcivan and support the Muslims in Aralik village in Revan, who fought against the Armenians in Vididi village. However, they were told that this was impossible and no promises were given. They had to make some political attempts and protect the Muslims from the attacks. PMOA. FA. P. T, 57\4, 1919 VII 24

1919 / 07 / 26 The British representative, District Head Official Rawlinson examined both sides of the border and prepared a report in which he confessed that the Armenians had committed massacres at the front from Oltu to the Bayezid border. He demanded that the Allied Powers send their forces to the district to punish them. Through this report, Rawlinson tried to urge the British to send their forces to Caucasia. PMOA. FA. P. WW, 136, 1919 VII 25

1919 / 07 / 27 The Former provincial governor of Kağızman, Arslan Bey, was stopped, with his family, by the Armenians on their way to Kars. They were raped and murdered. PMOA. FA. P. WW, 136, 1919 VII 14
